

Journal of Expertise
2018, Vol. 1(2)
© 2018. The authors license this article under the terms of the
Creative Commons
Attribution 3.0 License.
ISSN 2573-2773

Contents

Special Issue: Current Directions in Expertise Research

- 103-104 Introduction to this Issue
Guillermo Campitelli¹ and David Z. Hambrick²
¹School of Psychology & Social Science, Edith Cowan University
²Department of Psychology, Michigan State University
- 105-106 Cover Photograph: Behind the Scene
Neil Charness
Department of Psychology, Florida State University
- 107-113 The Future of Expertise: The Need for a Multidisciplinary Approach
Fernand Gobet
Department of Psychological Sciences, University of Liverpool
- 114-120 Giftedness and Expertise: The Case for Genetic Potential
Ellen Winner^{1,2} and Jennifer E. Drake^{3,4}
¹Department of Psychology, Boston College; ²Graduate School of Education, Project Zero, Harvard University; ³Department of Psychology, Brooklyn College; ⁴Graduate Center, City University of New York
- 121-129 The Question of Expertise in Psychotherapy
Scott D. Miller, Mark A. Hubble, and Daryl Chow
International Center for Clinical Excellence

Regular Article

- 130-135 The Limits of Expertise in Face Recognition: Response to Sunday and Gauthier's "Face Expertise for Unfamiliar Faces: A Commentary on Young and Burton's 'Are We Face Experts?'"
Andrew W. Young and A. Mike Burton
Department of Psychology, University of York