

Contents

- 77-91      The Role of Elite Education and Inferred Cognitive Ability in Eminent Creative Expertise: An Historical Analysis of the TIME 100
Jonathan Wai<sup>1</sup>, Matthew C. Makel<sup>2</sup>, and James Gambrell<sup>3</sup>
<sup>1</sup>Department of Education Reform and Department of Psychology, University of Arkansas, USA
<sup>2</sup>Talent Identification Program, Duke University, USA
<sup>3</sup>Independent
- 92-120      The Identification of ‘Game Changers’ in England Cricket’s Developmental Pathway for Elite Spin Bowling: A Machine Learning Approach
Benjamin D. Jones<sup>1</sup>, Lew Hardy<sup>1</sup>, Gavin Lawrence<sup>1</sup>, Ludmila I. Kuncheva<sup>2</sup>, Thomas Du Preez<sup>1</sup>, Raphael Brandon<sup>3</sup>, Peter Such<sup>3</sup>, Mo Bobat<sup>3</sup>
<sup>1</sup>Institute for the Psychology of Elite Performance, Bangor University, Wales
<sup>2</sup>School of Computer Science and Electronic Engineering, Bangor University, Wales
<sup>3</sup>England and Wales Cricket Board, Lords Cricket Ground, London
- 121-139      Bugs on the Brain: A Mental Model Matching Approach to Cognitive Skill Acquisition in a Strategy Game
Joe A. Wasserman<sup>1</sup> and Kevin Koban<sup>2</sup>
<sup>1</sup>Department of Communications Studies, West Virginia University, USA
<sup>2</sup>Institute for Media Research, Chemnitz University of Technology, Germany
- 140-144      How and Why Wai and His Colleagues Reach Conclusions That Do Not Necessarily Follow from Their Data: Reflections on “The Role of Elite Education and Inferred Cognitive Ability in Eminent Creative Expertise: An Historical Analysis of the Time 100”
Robert J. Sternberg
Department of Psychology, Cornell University, USA
- 145-147      An Opportunity to Reflect on the Relationship between Elite Education, Inferred Cognitive Ability, and the Development of Eminent Creative Expertise
Jonathan Wai<sup>1</sup>, Matthew C. Makel<sup>2</sup>, and James Gambrell<sup>3</sup>
<sup>1</sup>Department of Education Reform and Department of Psychology, University of Arkansas, USA
<sup>2</sup>Talent Identification Program, Duke University, USA
<sup>3</sup>Independent

Journal of Expertise
2019. Vol. 2(2)
© 2019. The authors
license this article
under the terms of the
Creative Commons
Attribution 3.0 License.
ISSN 2573-2773